GERMAN MOVIE NIGHT

Fack Ju Göhte

(Boro Dagtekin, 2013)

Wednesday, Nov. 19, 2014 at 8pm
German House, 172 College Avenue, Room 102

Within 17 days after its release, the film was seen by three million people...

Bank robber Zeki Müller has just been released from prison. Upon his release, he goes to retrieve the money he stole in order to repay a debt, but his friend buried it in a construction site. During Zeki's time in prison, the construction project was completed and his money is now buried beneath the new gymnasium at the Goethe Gesamtschule. In order to obtain the money, Zeki applies for the vacant position of a deceased janitor. However, due to a misunderstanding, he is given a job as a substitute teacher. (Wikipedia).

Boro Dagtekin's second theatrical feature 'Fack ju Göthe' is a cheeky and funny comedy with laughter every minute, a pinch of feeling and brilliant actors – entirely in the tradition of his debut 'Türkisch für Anfänger'. (filmstarts.de)
